

CENTERVILLE CEMETERY
(ALSO CALLED TOWNSEND CEMETERY)
BROADWATER COUNTY
TOWNSEND, MONTANA
June 2011

This cemetery is located north of Townsend, in Broadwater County, Montana, Township 7 North, Range 2 East, Section 29. Take the Centerville Road which is just before the Highway 12 bridge, turn left on Mill Road, the cemetery is straight ahead. Many graves are marked with funeral markers which have been obliterated by weather and time. Some bodies have been removed to other cemeteries.

A search of death records at the Broadwater County Clerk and Recorder's Office, Townsend, Montana, revealed several names of those buried "Townsend." An assumption was made, because of the date of deaths, that they were buried in the Centerville Cemetery.

"Centreville was located on the east side of the Missouri River just across from the mouth of Indian Creek. It had a post office 1872-74 with John Robinson as postmaster, and again December 1874-83. The town faded when the railroad came in and built a station at Townsend." Roberta Carkeek Cheney, Names on the Face of Montana, The Story of Montana's Place Names, Mountain Press Publishing Company, Missoula, 1983.

Briggs	Luther				1836	1878/08/24	42	Helena Independent, 8/28/1878, page 3: The Body Not Found. Up to this writing we have not learned of the finding of the body of Judge Luther Briggs, who was drowned while fording the Missouri river near Springville by his horse getting into deep water. Every effort was made to recover the body by the citizens of that vicinity, among whom he had long resided and was quite popular. (he was born about 1836 in Ohio) Helena Independent, 9/29/1878, page 3: Body Found. The body of Luther Briggs, drowned while fording the Missouri river at the old Diamond R crossing below Springville, was found on Tuesday about three quarters of a mile below where he was swept from his horse. Helena Independent, 9/1/1878, page 3: Drowning of Judge Briggs. Full Particulars of the Sad Accident. To the Editor of the Independent: The particulars of the drowning of Mr. Luther Briggs in the Missouri river is as follows: On Saturday morning last Mr. Briggs and myself started for the ranch of Mr. Jacob Powers near Canton. We had heard that persons were crossing the river every day with perfect safety, and knowing that the distance by the way of the ford would shorten the time and travel via Centreville more than one half, we concluded to try the ford. When we arrived at the old Diamond R ford we halted, and discussed the propriety of crossing. Mr. Briggs seemed to apprehend danger, and remarked that we were not at the right crossing. I said that recent wagon and horse tracks, which were plainly visible, demonstrated the fact that we were at the proper point to cross, and agreed to venture in the stream first, which I immediately did, and crossed over without difficulty to myself or horse. When on the opposite bank, I turned to watch Mr. Briggs. He started in the stream, but had not gone more than twenty feet when his horse stumbled and fell, and in jumping or plunging in the water to recover his foothold, precipitated Mr. Briggs into the swiftest part of the stream. At the moment I saw what had happened, I urged my horse back into the water, starting in the direction of Mr. Briggs, hoping to overtake him and render assistance; but in spite of all my efforts the unresisting body rolled with the current faster than I could travel my horse. My next thought was to return to the short Mr. Briggs had just left, he drifting nearer to that shore than where I was. I returned as soon as possible, jumped off my horse and ran down the stream, thinking, perhaps, I might be able to reach him to the bend of the river below; but when I reached the river, through the willows that thickly skirted the bank, his body had entirely disappeared, and I knew then of a certainty that he was drowned. I returned home immediately and reported the sad news. We procured boats, grappling hooks, giant powder and everything necessary for recovering the body, and diligently searched – dragging the river for two or three miles up and down, on both sides, on Saturday and Sunday, but without success. On Tuesday we fired several heavy shots of giant powder, and next morning the body was found on a riffle near the Fisher ferry, about three miles or more below the Diamond R ford. A casket was procured, and to day, in the presence of many who had gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed one, his body, under the impressive ceremonies of the Masonic order, was consigned to a place in the Centerville cemetery. Gavin Johnston. Bedford, August 29, 1878.

A dynamic man, Mr. Marks figured in almost every interest in the Townsend area. He mined, ran freight lines, stage lines, mail routes, livery stable, sawmill, bakery, cheese factory, dairy, besides vast ranch holdings. He had a hand in building roads, the first grade school, courthouse and a roller skating rink. He was in partnership in building and operating the Townsend House and Mercantile, the first two big buildings in the town of Townsend. Stone has covered wagon and 1866.

Page 18 of Broadwater Bygones: Bedford Maxwell and son John came from Texas to follow the gold rush to Virginia City, thence to Last Chance Gulch and then to Indian Creek. They were progressively inclined and built the first ferry boat to be used in the Missouri River in the area – The Bedford Ferry. It was located below the mouth of Indian Creek where the main road dropped down from the flats (right where the highway bridge is today) and was a popular gathering place so interestingly expressed in an issue of the Helena Herald: "The Bedford Ferry is the cross road and point where the 'sports' from Diamond City, Indian Creek, Hog'em and Horseshoe Bend congregate on Sunday to enjoy racing and sure to meet up with a friend." John did not stay long in the area, but Bedford G. Maxwell remained to see a town named for him and to become a charter member of Valley Lodge #21 A.F. and A.M. at Centerville in 1875.

R. Morgan, of Confederate creek. He was breaking a young horse to the saddle and was violently thrown from him stroking on the ground with his head. He was conscious only for a few moments afterwards, when reason forsook her throne to return no more. Dr. McDonald was summoned from Diamond and everything possible was done, but in vain. Death came to his relief about noon Monday last. He was an only son, and the pride of his fond parents' hearts. It is sad, indeed, to see a youth of such promise cut down while just upon the threshold of a useful and active life, with the hopes and joys of manhood almost within his grasp. It is a severe blow to Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, such as only the doting parents of an only son can know. Deep and bitter must be their cut of sorrow, but all flesh must bow in submission to the Will that doest all things well. Our deepest sympathies are theirs. 1880 Census, Montana, Meagher County, Missouri River Valley: Walter R. 								Albert Slee, the ten years old son of Mr. Slee, of Deep creek, Meagher county, was kicked by a mule on Wednesday of last week, and terribly mangled. He had gone to the stable to take the mule to water and evidently scared the animal, which is said to have been a docile, gentle creature. The little boy was taken from the stable in an unconscious condition and so remained until Sunday, during which day he died. The family have the sincere sympathy of their neighbors and friends in their bereavement.

The Townsend Star, September 14, 1907:

Obituary.

On Wednesday morning, Sept. 11th, the town was startled and shocked because of the sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. Wm. [Myra] Townsend. While it was known to her family and physician that she had heart trouble, speedy relief from the vicissitudes of this life were not under contemplation at all. It seems she went to the wood pile to get an armful of wood and without showing any signs of distress or pain, fell dead. Mrs. Fowell, who was at home, was the first to notice her, and running to her relief, was rewarded with but one sign of life – a long last gasp for breath. She was carried to the house and Dr. Gilham sent for, but long before he reached the home she was dead. Myrtle Douthitt was born January 12, 1862, in Ritchey, Mo: She was married to Wm. Townsend at Neosho, Mo., April 21, 1883. Five children came to bless the union of Mr. and Mrs. Townsend, three boys and two girls. Two of the sons were buried in Colorado and three children survive her, namely Mrs. Fowell of Harlowton, Miss Nellie Townsend, and Burt Townsend. The funeral obsequies took place at the home and the M. E. church, Rev. J. M. Faith officiating. The service was a very impressive one, an appropriate sermon and excellent singing, and the church was beautifully decorated with flowers. The burial took place at the Centerville cemetery. Mrs. Townsend was a pleasant, affable and generous woman. During her residence in Townsend, she gained the friendship of all who knew her and her death is a hard blow to many friends as well as to the family. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to Mr. Townsend and his family in their sad bereavement.
